- 1) whose use infringes third parties' personal or economic rights;
- 2) which is identical to a trade mark, which has been granted a right of protection with earlier priority to another party for identical products;

- 4) which is identical or similar to a renowned trade mark for which a right of protection with an earlier priority has been granted to another person for any kind of goods, if the use of the trade mark filed without reasonable cause would bring unfair advantage to the applicant or be detrimental to the distinctive character or the repute of the earlier trade mark;
- 5) which is identical or similar to a trade mark which, prior to the date according to which the priority to obtain a right of protection is determined, has been commonly known in the Republic of Poland and used as a trade mark intended to mark products identical or similar to those of another party, if there is a risk of misleading the public, which includes in particular the risk of associating the trade mark with a commonly known trade mark;
- 6) if, pursuant to the national law or the European Union legislation providing for protection of a geographical indication or a designation of origin, a person authorised to exercise the rights arising from an earlier filing of an application for a geographical indication or a designation of origin, subject to its subsequent registration, is entitled to prohibit the use of a subsequent trade mark.

If the objection is found to be justified, the Patent Office shall dismiss the opposition.
